Marion

Egoli Africa: Marion Mwangazi has almost completed her training. She took her last exams last June, but unfortunately had to take one re-exam. As a result, she will now officially complete her training in December. But we are confident that this last re-examination will also be completed successfully given the positive message we received from Marion. We will send you some images of the official graduation ceremony, which is not scheduled yet. And; Marion has found a paid job: she works as a midwife in the referral hospital of Soroti!

It is thanks to iSTEPup that Marion has been able to make her dream come true and to find a job as a midwife. A job that allows her to further develop and gain experience as a professional. A job that allows her to provide for livelihood and be of significance to her family. But even more so; to be important for communities where healthcare is lagging behind on all fronts due to a lack of trained staff and facilities, making a difference for others, even though the lack of facilities remains an existing problem in Uganda. But thanks to you, she can use her knowledge where it is needed. Thank you!!
